Catholic Family Services in Orangeville

Individual Counselling can be very helpful for:

Addressing depression, anxiety and other difficult feeling states. Dealing with self-criticism, judgements and low self-esteem. Adjusting to a new culture. Handling work concerns and pressures. Coping with challenging life stressors or losses. Changing problematic behaviours (e.g. over eating, smoking) Improving relationships with others. Maximizing personal growth and potential.

Couple Counselling can help with:

Developing more connectedness and emotional closeness. Understanding your partner, their thoughts, feelings and behaviours. Building effective communication. Resolving and learning how to have successful conflicts. Managing relationship issues when there are irreconcilable differences.

Coming to terms with and moving beyond affairs and other emotional injuries. Co-parenting effectively, even when you disagree. Deepening and strengthening an already solid relationship. Family counselling can provide help with:

Learning to communicate more effectively with your kids. Encouraging cooperation with respect to chores, mealtimes, schoolwork, etc. Building successful stepfamilies. Promoting positive relationships between brothers and sisters. Finding solutions for difficult or disruptive behaviour.

Resolving and negotiating family conflicts. Handling separation and divorce in a respectful way. Keeping the lines of communication open with your children during the immigration and settlement process.

Coping with extended family. Finding quality time to have fun as a family. When seeking counselling for yourself and your children we ask that the parent(s) attend the first session without their children. (Childcare is available at the Walk-in clinics to make this easier). We do this in order to determine custody and how to proceed in the best way for all involved. If you are separated or divorced you will be asked to bring legal documentation outlining custody agreements to this first session.

If you are interested in our counselling programs please call and speak to a caseworker at telephone:
